

We know that talking about domestic violence can be hard, but you are not alone.

Due to the coronavirus pandemic, domestic violence (DV) cases and a worsening of the violence have become a concern. For DV victims to safely consult with us, we provide consultations by SNS as well as online interpreter services (English included) and shelters.

STOP! Child Abuse

You are legally liable to report a child abuse case to the authority immediately upon witnessing a possibly abused child. After all, notifying the authority helps both the abused child and their guardians.

Child Abuse National Hotline

Five ways to detect an abused child

1. If you suspect a child abuse case, do not hesitate to call the Child Consultation Center (Jido Sodanjo in Japanese) in your local municipality (city/town/village)
2. "I was just trying to discipline my child" is always the excuse an abusive parent would say. (Your judgment based on the child's well-being is appreciated.)
3. Find someone to talk about what you've witnessed. (Start with what you can do to help.)
4. Children always come first. (Their lives must be protected.)
5. Child abuse is actually is common in your everyday surroundings. (It's not something that is happening in another world. )
6. Click here for definition of "child abuse" (in Japanese.)
